Stone Forest, Kunming

Kunming Stone Forest, Shilin in Chinese, is a spectacular set of limestone groups and the representative of south China's karst landscape. Known since the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644) as the 'First Wonder of the World', it is one of the most important attractions of Yunnan. An old local goes that if you have visited Kunming without seeing the Stone Forest, you have wasted your time.

Jiuxiang Cave

Jiuxiang Cave, also known as Jiuxiang Scenic Region (九乡风景区) is located in the mountainous area in Jiuxiang Yi and Hui Autonomous Township of Yiliang County with an elevation between 1750m to 1900m. It is 30km from the Stone Forest and 90km from Kunming city center.

Jiuxiang Cave is a national scenic spots and historical sites which is praised as the "Museum of Karst Caves", boasts more than 100 Karst caves and is the largest cave group system in China. The cave formations are very varied and the rivers, waterfalls, and natural rock bridges are very enchanting. With lush forest, rich animal and plant resources in Jiuxiang Scenic Region, the formation are very varied and the colorful underground palace, grand Karst stone terrace, pellucid rapid stream, rambling magnificent twin waterfalls, and natural rock bridges are all made the place very enchanting.
